THE ARCTIC CIRCLE

The Arctic Circle in Rovaniemi, Finnish Lapland, is located 66°33'07" North of the Equator and 25°50'51" East of Greenwich. The sun shines here for an uninterrupted period of 720 hours in midsummer. In contrast, there are only a couple of hours of daylight each day in December: this is known as the "kaamos" period. But this means more than just darkness. It also means tranquility, peace, rest and holidays.
